Dave,

Please see the note from Jenn below....

She makes a good point about making sure that the authors of 3 get credit in the other chapters.

Will send the other material shortly,

Subject: Chapter 3

Hi Tom,

Good speaking with you earlier today. I spoke with Larry Kapustka about our discussion regarding Chapter 3. He concurred that editors have the obligation to produce a cohesive product that reads smoothly and not as merely a collection of chapters. The trick is to make sure that the contributors are on board with the general layout and that proper credit goes to the contributing authors. The best way to proceed is for you and Dave to convince the author of the benefits to the organization. Larry said that in the past the most pressing issues have occurred when Editors reorganized and authors were then left off of the chapter as a contributor. It doesn't sound like that is at issue here, though. If the author remains adamant, then we will need to see more detail, including the correspondence trail, initial submission and the revised form, and cost estimates for making modifications that might be warranted.

I hope you are able to come to a good conclusion, though. Please keep me posted.

Also, when you start sending along queries this afternoon, could you also send your thoughts on the cover images? If we need to ask the designer to tweak anything, we should get on that sooner rather than later.

Thank so much!
All the best,
Jen
